WHEREAS, Washington State is one of the most productive agricultural regions in the country, and Washington farmers and ranchers produce $10.6 billion in food and agricultural products every year; and

WHEREAS, the quality and diversity of Washington agricultural products is recognized throughout the country, ranking us first in the nation in providing many staple foods; and

WHEREAS, the National School Lunch Program and School Breakfast Program encourages eating these nutritious agricultural products by providing affordable meals and supporting school purchases of local foods for students; and

WHEREAS, Washington State growers produce more than $42 million worth of food products that are distributed to the National School Lunch Program and other food assistance programs by the United States Department of Agriculture; and

WHEREAS, the federal Healthy, Hunger Free Kids Act of 2010 and the Washington State Local Farms Healthy Kids Act of 2008 support increased consumption of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, and low-fat dairy products which can be provided by Washington producers; and

WHEREAS, the Washington State Department of Agriculture Farm to School Program connects Washington farms with schools to increase purchases of Washington-grown foods and improves students’ health and learning by supporting nutritious, locally-grown meals, school gardens, and education about Washington foods and farms; and

WHEREAS, the Washington School Nutrition Association and Office of Superintendent of Public Instruction Child Nutrition provide invaluable service to our state’s schools, helping to ensure healthy, well-balanced meals for our school children,

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Jay Inslee, Governor of the state of Washington, do hereby proclaim October 2, 2019, as in the State of Washington, and I urge all citizens to join me in recognizing the value of the school meal programs and the contributions made to it by Washington state agriculture.

Signed this 19th day of September, 2019

Governor Jay Inslee
